On Constructivist Epistemology - Constructivism (psychological school) - Wikipedia Jean Piaget (1896–1980), the creator of genetic epistemology, argued that positions of knowledge are grown into; that they are not given a priori, as in Kant's epistemology, but rather that knowledge structures develop through interaction. Piaget's theory is ultimately falsificationist: "behaviour is the motor of evolution". His major publications spanned fifty years from the 1920s to the 1970s.
